The Topic of the Conference

When, in 2007, we launched the Mondigranti "adventure", we had the following goals:

Mondi Migranti has at least three main objectives. The first is to enhance the quality of scientific debate in the migration field, which, in Italy, is characterized by the relative youth of the subject, its burning relevance to contemporary Italian society, and the intersections between scientific reflection, political debate and militant controversy. Secondly, Mondigranti offers itself as a forum for international scientific debate on migration issues. The third function of a specialized scientific review is to provide opportunities for the publication of worthy articles, to stimulate scientific debate in the field and to provide a space for the exchange of ideas and research outcomes.

After ten years of activity, we wish to provide an opportunity to get an overview of the current research on migration to Italy. A short session will focus on the review and the role it plays, like other similar journals do, within debates in this field. In the spirit of the Journal, however, we also wish to offer, on this day, an opportunity for researchers who explore the key themes of Mondigranti to present and discuss their papers.

The conference will be held over one day and will be divided into two parallel thematic sessions:

session A) Theory and research on migration phenomena; session B) Theory and research on migration policies;
